Where the comparables sit

Basis of assessment

Tier A comparable median	£425,000
Sold-anchored value (evidence + AVM)	£425,000
Live-market adjustment (Softening market)	-2.3%
Assessed central value	£415,000

Comparable sold evidence and the condition-adjusted valuation anchor the value; the live market then steers it. Live comparable stock is averaging 113 days on the market (11% under offer, 36% stuck 90+ days). That reads as a softening market, so the sold-anchored value is steered 2.3% down to reflect what the market will pay today, not months ago. The result is an assessed range of £415,000 to £440,000, central about £415,000. Confidence is moderate; see Limitations.

Live market & competitive positioning

Sold prices anchor the value; this live band is how we steer it for current conditions. Across the district 178 comparable homes are currently listed at £350,000 to £575,000, median asking £450,000, average 113 days on the market. Asking prices signal vendor hope, not achieved value, so they inform the market steer and the positioning here - they never set the figure on their own.

64 of those listings have sat unsold for 90 days or more. In this district an over-ambitious asking price does not win a higher sale - it produces a longer, costlier one. The recommended £375,000 is set toward the lower end of the live band, anchored to sold evidence, to draw viewings and competing offers rather than join the stalled listings above.

Market outlook

These are the scheduled, factual influences on what a buyer can actually pay - the cost of borrowing and the tax on the purchase. They shape demand, so they sit beside the figure; they do not move it. Forecasting them into the number would be a guess, and a guess is exactly what this report exists to replace.

Bank Rate has held at 3.75% since December 2025. The next decision is 18 Jun 2026; markets lean to a hold, with an outside cut to 3.50% if CPI cools. Steady borrowing costs keep mortgage affordability flat - supportive of demand, not a tailwind.

Stamp duty at this level is about £10,750 (first-time buyers: £5,750).

This sits above the £300,000 first-time-buyer nil-rate band, so first-timers pay 5% on the slice above £300,000 - it narrows the first-time-buyer pool.

Methodology, limitations & sources

- A home is worth what the market will pay. HM Land Registry sold evidence (via PropertyData) is the anchor - the floor of fact - but it lags the market by months, so we do not value on sold data alone. A bounded, fully-disclosed adjustment (capped at +6% / -5%) steers the figure for live market conditions: how fast comparable stock is going under offer, how long it sits, where it is priced. Asking prices inform that steer and the positioning above; they never set the figure on their own.
- Comparables are filtered to same property type and a focused size band around the subject, then weighted by proximity. The condition-adjusted valuation models finish quality against the same area and bedroom profile.
- Floor area is EPC-recorded; a measured survey may differ. Refurbishment specification is not independently inspected. This is a comparative market appraisal, not a RICS Red Book valuation.
- Sources: HM Land Registry Price Paid Data (OGL v3.0), gov.uk/search-house-prices, via the PropertyData API; EPC Register; HMRC CGT rates.
