

58, Cronin Street, London, SE15 6JH

103 sqm - 4 bed - EPC C - Council Tax B - 6 sold comparables analysed

Assessed value range	£490,000 - £590,000
Central value	~ £490,000
Recommended guide	Offers Over £425,000
Last recorded sale	£320,000 (6 Feb 2015)
Held as	Primary residence

Executive summary

This appraisal values 58, Cronin Street, London, SE15 6JH at £490,000 to £590,000, with a central figure of about £490,000. The 4-bedroom maisonette of approximately 103 sqm sits within a comparable price tier of £445,000 to £706,700, set by 6 same-size, same-character properties that actually sold near it. The recommended position is Offers Over £425,000.

The property on record

Recorded internal area 1109 sqft (103 sqm). EPC score C. Council Tax Band B. construction England and Wales: 1976-1982. tenure 125 years from 1 September 2003. Last sold £320,000 on 6 Feb 2015.

Comparable evidence (sold)

Same-size, same-character properties sold near the subject, from HM Land Registry Price Paid Data via PropertyData. The closest comparables are shown; each 'record' link opens the free public transaction - the exact sale, the property and its photographs. Verify every figure yourself.

Comparable	Size	Sold	When	GBP/sqm	Dist	Verify
Flat 8	97 sqm	£445,000	2026-01	£4,588	0.17 mi	record
Flat 6	95 sqm	£505,000	2024-06	£5,316	0.2 mi	record
95	104 sqm	£590,000	2026-04	£5,673	0.25 mi	record
Flat 8	92 sqm	£500,000	2026-03	£5,435	0.27 mi	record
Flat 9	118 sqm	£612,500	2024-10	£5,191	0.35 mi	record
102	114 sqm	£706,700	2024-11	£6,199	0.4 mi	record

Showing the 6 closest of 6 comparables analysed. Tier A median £548,000.

Where the comparables sit

Basis of assessment

Tier A comparable median	£548,000
Condition-adjusted valuation, average finish	£510,000
Condition-adjusted valuation, high finish	£560,000
Condition-adjusted valuation, very high finish	£610,000
GBP/sqm cross-check (£5,375 x 103 sqm)	£553,676
Sold-anchored value (evidence + AVM)	£510,000
Live-market adjustment (Softening market)	-3.6%
Assessed central value	£490,000

Comparable sold evidence and the condition-adjusted valuation anchor the value; the live market then steers it. Live comparable stock is averaging 144 days on the market (5% under offer, 27% stuck 90+ days). That reads as a softening market, so the sold-anchored value is steered 3.6% down to reflect what the market will pay today, not months ago. The result is an assessed range of £490,000 to £590,000, central about £490,000. Confidence is moderate; see Limitations.

Live market & competitive positioning

Sold prices anchor the value; this live band is how we steer it for current conditions. Across the district 22 comparable homes are currently listed at £400,000 to £800,000, median asking £600,000, average 144 days on the market. Asking prices signal vendor hope, not achieved value, so they inform the market steer and the positioning here - they never set the figure on their own.

6 of those listings have sat unsold for 90 days or more. In this district an over-ambitious asking price does not win a higher sale - it produces a longer, costlier one. The recommended Offers Over £425,000 is set toward the lower end of the live band, anchored to sold evidence, to draw viewings and competing offers rather than join the stalled listings above.

Market outlook

These are the scheduled, factual influences on what a buyer can actually pay - the cost of borrowing and the tax on the purchase. They shape demand, so they sit beside the figure; they do not move it. Forecasting them into the number would be a guess, and a guess is exactly what this report exists to replace.

Bank Rate has held at 3.75% since December 2025. The next decision is 18 Jun 2026; markets lean to a hold, with an outside cut to 3.50% if CPI cools. Steady borrowing costs keep mortgage affordability flat - supportive of demand, not a tailwind.

Stamp duty at this level is about £14,500 (first-time buyers: £9,500).

This sits above the £300,000 first-time-buyer nil-rate band, so first-timers pay 5% on the slice above £300,000 - it narrows the first-time-buyer pool.

Live momentum, read from official statistics rather than kept by hand:

Live macro momentum is leaning soft for prices (score -0.79 on a -2 to +2 scale).

2-year fixed mortgage rate is 4.84%, above its 3-year average of 4.76% - a drag on affordability.

Real pay growth is about +0.9% (pay 4.1% against 2.8% inflation); rising real incomes lift buyer budgets.

Unemployment is 5.0%, above its 3-year average of 4.5% - softening labour market underpins less of housing demand.

These are demand conditions over the next 6 to 12 months. They sit beside the figure, not inside it - the number is built from sold evidence.

(Momentum sources: Bank of England IADB IUMBV34, ONS D7G7, ONS KAC3, ONS MGSX. Measured against each series' trailing window; a description of conditions, not a forecast.)

Market intelligence from Reddit

What people are saying about the local market online. These are real discussions from UK property subreddits - buyer experiences, seller frustrations, agent complaints, and market sentiment. Sits beside the hard sold-evidence numbers as context, not a valuation input.

Local sentiment: Cautious / concerned

Key themes: negotiation / offers | market conditions | chain / transaction stress | rental / landlord

r/HousingUK

A warning about cash buyers

"I'm in complete disbelief. Our seemingly perfect cash buyers have pulled out at the last minute, crashing our chain. I want to share how they weaponised their status so others can avoid the same trap.  Like any seller, we were delighted to get an..."

r/Propertyuk

Buyers pulled out but estate agent and solicitors have been lying to the whole chain

"My partner and I are selling our house which we accepted the offer on back in April. After seeing documents with names on it became clear that one of the buyers was someone that I went to school with over 10 years ago (who I have not spoken to since..."

r/UKProperty

Renegotiate house price following Coronavirus?

"We had an offer accepted on a property in mid-February. In light of the growing Coronavirus situation, I have had some reservations with proceeding with the sale on the agreed price. It looks as though there will be an unavoidable effect on the..."

Reddit sentiment for additional context only - not a valuation input. Sourced from UK property subreddits (r/HousingUK, r/PropertyUK).

Net proceeds

Achieved price	£490,000
Estimated agent fee (2% + VAT)	£11,760
Net in pocket	£478,240

Methodology, limitations & sources

- A home is worth what the market will pay. HM Land Registry sold evidence (via PropertyData) is the anchor - the floor of fact - but it lags the market by months, so we do not value on sold data alone. A bounded, fully-disclosed adjustment (capped at +6% / -5%) steers the figure for live market conditions: how fast comparable stock is going under offer, how long it sits, where it is priced. Asking prices inform that steer and the positioning above; they never set the figure on their own.
- Comparables are filtered to same property type and a focused size band around the subject, then weighted by proximity. The condition-adjusted valuation models finish quality against the same area and bedroom profile.
- Floor area is EPC-recorded; a measured survey may differ. Refurbishment specification is not independently inspected. This is a comparative market appraisal, not a RICS Red Book valuation.
- Sources: HM Land Registry Price Paid Data (OGL v3.0), gov.uk/search-house-prices, via the PropertyData API; EPC Register; HMRC CGT rates.

Your interactive chart is attached in this chat

Open the HTML file above and tap any sold comparable to verify it on HM Land Registry.

Value another property yourself on Telegram - https://t.me/usehonestly_bot

Prepared by Honestly - made with Honestly - 7 June 2026